REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

RACINE, Wis., July 25, 1881 There will be a convention representing the Republican party of Wisconsin, at Madison, on Wednesday, the twenty-first day of September, at noon, to nominate a State ticket consisting of candidates for Governor and other State offiof candidates for crovering and other state uni-cers to be supported by the party at the coming November election, and to transact such other business as may properly come before the convention. Each Senate and Assembly district is entitled to two delegates to be selected in the

It will take three years to dispose of the case of heresy against Dr. Thomas, of Unsuccessful attempts are still being made to recover the body of A. T. Stewart by digging in the cemetery in which it is alleged it was buried.

The case of the Malley boys, of New Haven, charged with the murder of Jonnie Cramer, has been postponed for two weeks. The judge refused to admit them to bail.

If all the farmers who will attend the Republican State convention as delegates will vote together, they can probably secure a place on the ticket for a representive of the agricultural element.

The Hon. J. A. Bentley, of this State, formerly commissioner of pensions, will soon leave Sheboygan and go to Denver, where he will engage in the practice of the law. Mr. Bentley has the energy and capacity to guarantee him a large practice wherever he may go.

This item is traveling about: Casper M. Sanger, of Milwaukee, Wis., has sold "Sunnyside," near Ripon, for $38,-500. "Sunnyside" cost General John McDonald, of St. Louis whisky ring fame, more than $200,000. He is now as poor as when he began life.

Eighty thousand people have contributed one cont each to Captain Cook, who slapped Bill Morrison's mouth for wishing Garfield would die. The subscriptions are still pouring in from all over Ohio, and the result will be that Captain Cook will have a big purse and a good deal of fame.

A report from the peach-growing localities in the East, says the prophets who predicted that the Delaware peach crop would be a failure were right. It is evident that the yield will be very light, not more than 100,000 bushels, says a good authority. Compared with the bountiful crops of last year, when the Delaware railroad alone delivered about 2,000,000 baskets, this is in truth a "beggarly show of empty boxes." There is consolation, however, in the announcement that the freezing weather which killed the buds did not injure the trees.

Some one writes from Madison to the Milwaukee Sentinel in regard to the feeling in Dane county on the gubernatorial question. It is said the sentiment there is largely in favor of Warner. In reference to the Secretary of State the correspondent says: "For Secretary of State, Ole C, Johnson, of Rock, is preferred by the Norwegian element of Dane county, which will probably give him a complimentary vote. Next to him, Captain Timme, of Kenosha, is the favorite, and the probability that Mr. Warner will be nominated for Governor, gives him that advantage over Colonel Johnson. No one believes that both Warner and Johnson will succeed, and both will certainly not have the support of a majority of the Dane county delogation."

It is sincerely wished that there were grounds for stronger hope in the Presi dent's recovery. His condition is still very critical, and looking at the case as best we possibly can, it is exceedingly serious. A month ago the country was led to indulge in the belief that he was out of danger. The daily bulletins were heralding good news, and the minds of the people had settled down to think that all danger had passed. But when the truth became known, the President had not been rapidly improving, but was gradually growing weaker and weaker until his life hung on a very slender thread. However, all hope has not been blasted. possibility that he

There is may recover. The chances are against him, but the physicians still think that when his stomach weakness is over with that he will certainly get well, as the wound is rapidly healing. There is such a complication of difficulties, however, just now, that there is but little faith prevailing that he will recover. Looking at the situation as hopefully as one car under the circumstances, there is at best but a gloomy outlook. The disability question connected with the President, continues to be discussed by certain newspapers and critics. There are some who are bound to believe that Vice President Arthur is being robbed of the right, which the constitution gives him to act as President when the President is on his back and unable to perform the duties of the office. There does department. But opinion of some of the best constitutional lawyers in the country that he can not do so, and therefore he has not been called to Washington for that purpose. All the departments of the administration, except that of the executive, is being transacted as usual, and the members of the cabinet are doing business in harmony. The statement that possibility, that the convention will be Mr. Blaine is acting President is simply an idea that has entered the heads of those who are opposed to the Sceretary of State. It is true that there is some important business which should be settled in the executive department, but the judgment of the best statesmen in the country is that it can wait the recovery of the President, if he recovers at all.

The Milwaukee Republican says: The Minvance Republican says:

The Janesville Gazette opposes the nomination of candidates for State officers from Congressional districts. It says: There is nothing equitable in such a division, as the district which gets governor is much better served than that which gets insurance commissioner. Besides, the re-districting of the State next sides, the re-districting of the State next winter will doubtless disturb all arrange ments made previously on the basis of district citizenship. We hope that but httle regare will be paid to the claim of each district having a nominee on the State ticket. It looks too much like or maining a bundle of falls. These mithing ganizing a bundle of little States within the State.

The Republican is usually correct in giving credit, but in this case it is in error. The Gazette never printed an editorial note like the one credited to this paper. We believe in a wise geographical distribution of the nominees on the State ticket, and as near as possible to give the nominations to various congressional districts. Always this can not be done. And cach district can not have a candidate as there eight cougressional districts and only seven places on the ticket. But as a rule the distributian can be just so that each principal section of the State will have a fitting representative in the State administration. The Gazette is unable to see how this system of distributing the nominations "looks too much like organizing a bundle of little States within the State."

There is an impression that the eminent forger, liar, and bigamist, Arthur T. Merritt, alias the Hon. Alfred T. Marvin, alias Thomas Marvin, alias David Linsley, alias General Morton, and several other aliases, will escape justice after all. It is true he is in jail. But he has been in jail before and always managed to get out. No man in this country ever made such a capture of ladies as this man Marvin. His fascination seems to have been almost unlimited. It was only necessary for him to see widows and virgins in order to capture them. Wherever he went the ladies allowed their affection to run after him. His last marriage was in Richmond, Virginia, and in a few days was to have been married to an estimable young lady in New Jersey. He had two wives in New York, one in Painesville, one or two in Jersey City, and one in Little Rock, and was engaged to the daughter of an ex-Governor of Missouri. He had married ten wives in the course of five er six years, and was about to marry two others when his arrest was made. To the grief of many a tailor he always dressed well, and was perfectly charmin versation. He was decidedly handsome, having a roseate complexion, beautiful hair and whiskers, a small foot, was well built, and was "too sweet for anything." These qualifications captured the ladies and they gave him their hearts and hands without delay or grace. He could have had more wives than Brigham Young, if he could have found time to have married them, and could have made his selections from the highest socicty. But retribution has probably come at last, at least he is in jail, but he got out so many times by his winsome smiles, elegant language, and polished mauners, that it would not be a strange thing if he again escaped punishment.

Ex-Speaker of the Assembly, Hon. A. A. Arnold, of Trempealeau, has written a letter to the Milwaukee Sentinel on the Farmers' Alliance and the Republican State convention. Mr. Arnold is a promment member of the Alliance, is a politician and a farmer, and marks out a course of action which the Alliance will insist shall be taken. He says so far as he is aware, the intention of the Alliance is to support their respective party tickets, but only on condition that the nominations be satisfactory to the Alliance and meeting their ideas of right and justice. Mr. Arnold says the Republican convention must adopt suitable resolutions and recognize the Allianco by giving the farmers some place on the ticket, or they will be kicking and bolting and final defeat. Mr. Arnold is a little " too previous" in pledging a bolt on the part of the Republicans who are farmers, if so and so is not done by the convention. That convention will contain a very large representation of farmers. They will hold the balance of power, and can nearly dictate any nomination they choose, but it is hardly possible that they will demand a farmer on the ticket regardless of his strength and fitness. It is true there are a great many farmers who are able to fill any position within the gift of the people of this State, and it would be a wise thing to give that element some recognition if it could be fairly done. But Mr. Arnold places very little value on the intelligence, and good sense of the farmers of Wisconsin, when the should rule. The convention will no doubt give the Republicans a good ticket. All the leading candidates mentioned are splendid men and no farmer need be ashamed to vote for any of them. We do not believe that Mr. Arnold's plan to dictate or bolt will gain much favor among the better class of farmers. Neither is there is any probability, or even controlled by corporations. Bailway corporations know enough not to attempt to marshal their forces and influence in a Republican convention in Wisconsin.

PUBLIC CRITICISM.

The Crowds Discussing the Bullo tins and Making Comparisons.

Washington, Aug. 22.—On the streets to-night there was even a larger crowd than usual reading the bulletins in the windows and discussing the possibilities. To tell the truth, the latest intelligence was not reassuring to any who regarded the high pulse with apprehension. Several called to mind the fact that the pulse had not been below 100 for forty-eight hours so far as reported, and others cemmented upon the fever. The reasoning of the usual professional crowd was very different from that of the physicians. latter said the patient better than he was yester-The people asked how did his conyesterdition compare with last week or last month. Has he not been announced as "better than yesterday" almost every day and had he not steadily grown worse in reality, when one week was compared with another. Thus the crowd argued with another. Thus the crowd argued and compared opinions and exchanged information on the corner until a late hour and dispersed but little better satisfied than yesterday, but without that positive dread of the possibilities of an hour that he had also better the same of the possibilities of an hour that had characterized the night be-

Among others who were discussing the case to-night was a physician, who said that he believed in the theory that he had given expression to some days ago, to the effect that the President had never recovered from the shock and that he was suffering from a debility of nervous force. He thought that this accounted in a measure for the weakness of athe stomed, and that the gastric nerves were affected. Had it been nothing more than his chronic dyspepsia he would not have had so much trouble whon he was in reality taking no food, Then his dyspepsia could not have been so scrious, because he must have taken a good deal of food and digested it, or he could not have maintened to be the large could not have maintained the large frame and flesh that he did. This gentleman was quite sure, therefore, that the trouble with the stomach was a nervous one.

The White House was closed as usual a little after 10 o'clock. Reports up to that hour tannounced the President as still comfortable and sleeping most of the time, without gastric disturbance or pain from the glandular swelling. It was confidently expected at this time that to-morrow would see further progress in the right direction, after a night that bids fair to be auspicious.

PIERREPONT'S FEARS.

The Hos. Edwards Pierrepont's Cris icoms of the President's Trent.

NEW YORK, Aug.-The Hon. Edwards Pierrepont was met this morning by a reform the duties of the office. There does not appear to exist any sound reason why the Vice President should not act as President of the United States when the President is absolutely incompetent to transact the important business which is accumulating in the executive sense of the farmers of Wisconsin, when he says they will bolt if they can't dictate cussion of Presidentual inability which to the Republican convention. Where a convention is squarely made up, composed largely of farmers especially—men who homor their calling and are a credit to the Republican party—the majority of the distribution of Presidentual inability which certain physicians have assumed to settled by off hand opinion. "For what reason?"

"For the reason that he must, more or less, be suffering from the malarial atmosphere surrounding the White House and vicinity. I had occasion to spend two summers there, and I know quite well the bad effect it had on some of the strongest men. The month of September is the worst month in the year in Washington, the weather is very debitating, and the President should have been removed long ago. This could have been done without causing him any pain or running any risk, and I am much sur-prised to see him where he is, for the doctors know well what impure atmos-phere they had to contend with. I trust, however, he may yet recover, but I have

STEWART'S BODY.

The Huntfor It Mill Heinz Carried on at Cypress Hill Cometery.

New York, Aug. 22-There were three men at work at Cypress Hill cemetery digging up the ground in section 18, where it is rumored the body of A. T. Stewart was buried by the robbers who stole it from the grave in St. Mark's churchyard. There were fourteen persons watching the labor of these workmen this morning, eight of whom were reporters from this city and Brooklyn, three detectives, and the others officers of the cemetery. Detective Fuller had not arrived at the grounds at Faller had not arrived at the grounds at 12 o'clock to day, though he had informed his his subordinates that he would be present at 11 o'clock. The workmen were engaged in lengthening, widening, and deepening the trench bordering the carriageway in front of the plot. At that point of the trench were a bed of lillies, as represented in the oil painting sent to Detective Fuller. The men have dug down to the depth of about four feet. Among the men engaged in this work is Among the men engaged in this work is the man Degnan, who was one thought to be not Degian, who was one thought to be a spy in the service of the grave-robbers. The officers and workmen at the cometery place but little faith in the report that the body is buried in this part of the grounds. They say that if the thieves wished to bury the body in the cemetery they would have selected a quieter and less frequented part of the grounds. The place where the men are digging is only about five minutes walk in a southwesterly direction from the cottages overlooking the soldiers plat, and about midway between the rear entrance and the main entrance on the old Jamaica plank road. The work of dig-ging will go on for the next two or three days. To-morrow the force of men'at work will be increased.

YORKTOWN CELEBRATION,

Military Organizations that will Par tleipate in It.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Communicanons are constantly being received by the Yorktown Centennial commission from military organizations making inquiries about transportation or announcing their intention of participating in the ceremonies. Among the organizations which have recently signified their intention of participating are the Mayor's Guards of St. Louis, which took part in the manguration parade, a company from Clarksville, Ark., and the First battalion of Virginia militia, comprising three battories of artillery. The expected com-pletion of the Chesapeake & Ohio rail-road branch to Yorktown removes the annoying difficulties regarding wharfage facilities at that point.

Osnkosn, Aug. 22.—Two years ago Walter, Ballou, a business man of this city, died, leaving numerous debts and $11,000 of insurance, $5,000 of which was in the Pennsylvania, $3,000 in the Royal Arcanum, and $3,000 in the Knights of Honor. Creditors began suit for possession of the money, and the widow of Ballou contested it, the money being placed in court during the pending of the suit. Judge Pulling, before whom suit was brought, ruled in favor of the widow. The case has since dragged along, the creditors hoping to secure a re-hearing. The matter was, however, settled to-day, and the money paul to

AUNT SABRINA'S TREASURE.

There was great disappointment among the heirs-at-law when Aunt Sabring died suddenly, for she had been reputed rich, but in the light of legal investigation her possessions had dwin-died down to a few thousands and the house and grounds inherited from her

Why she was reputed rich it was dif-Why she was reputed rich it was difficult to say, for she had lived simply, and had held herself aloof from society. Her father, Colonel Henderson, had been a staunch patriot in time of the Revolution, but his brother Boyd was a Tory, and betook himself to England where the first health and the same of the same of arguing a question that was settled before you and I were born?"

"Not much, to be sure," said Mary.

"I should say so. There's nothing so very strange, either in a misorly old woman hiding her money—ther're alwhen the first hostile gun was fired, where he was afterward knighted.

Strange to say. Sabrina, who was at that time young and beautiful, sympathized with her uncle, though some said this was not so much from loyalty to king George as from loyalty to one of his officers.

Very certain it is that she was once arrested for giving aid and comfort to the enemy by means of secret information, and was only released out of respect to her father, who promised to doliver her up with his own hands it she ever sinned in like manner again. In process of time the war came to an end, and so did Colonel Henderson and his contemporaries. The British officer never appeared to claim his bride, and Aunt Sabrina grew old in singleblessedness. And now, she, too, was dead, and another head-stone of slate was to be added to the row in the family lot.

As I said, there was disappointment among the heirs, chief of whom was Sa-bring afavorite nephew Auson, to whom brines favorite nephew Auson, to whom fell the house and most of the money. He shared the general impression concerning Auat. Sabria's wealth. He knew that spechad received letters from the Pory mele. Six Boyd, while he lived, and believed he had bequeathed her something at his death.

He moreover believed that the title to this himstance, if not the inheritance itself, was contained in a certain cabinet which Aunt Sabrian had always guarded which Aunt Sabrian had always guarded which house care.

olth dealous care.

It was not known that any mortal eye beside her own had eyer looked inside t, and he had once seen her defend it with absolute ficreeness from the inspection of her father, the Colonel.

The key was found tied round her neck with a black cord after her death, and was immediately captured; but the cabinet was nowhere to be found, although the house was ransacked from ten to bettem top to bottom.

Then, after much the usual experiences of life, Anson died and was gathered to his fathers and his aunts. He left a widow and a son—a second Anson—who was at the same time the pride and the torment of his mother's life; her pride, because he was a bright, strong, handsome boy; her torment, because he was as headstrong and un-manageable a little sprite as ever lived. What he wanted to do, he did; what it

What he wanted to do, he did; what it did not suit him to do, he left undone.

Unfortunately, the story of Aunt Sabrina's lost cabinet had taken strong hold of his imagination, which is not greatly to be wondered at, since he had heard it repeated from his earliest infancy with such additions and emendations as time and tradition are sure to effect.

"A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," said his mother.

But warnings and counsels were alike thrown away on Anson. To the porter's lodge he moved his family, and soon the masons and carpenters were busy pulling the old house to pieces. Strict watch kept Anson lest any secret hiding-places should escape him, or

The probability that it contained a treasure became to his mind a certainty. When he was four years old, he was one day missed, greatly to the alarm of his parents, and just as they were on the point of summoning the town crier a servant found the child behind the great chimney in the garret, searching for Aunt Sabrina's cabinet.

By the time he was ten, the marks of

By the time he wasten, the marks of his little hatchet were found in every part of the house where a board or tim-ber gave promise of having a hollow space behind it. As hagrew older, the conviction which had so early taken possession of him became a mania which bade fair to be the making, or the marring, of his future life.
He was fifteen when his father died, bequeathing him the estate which, after the English fashion, he, the father, wished to keep in the Henderson name, the estate being chargeable, of course, with the widow's support.

Soon it became necessary that Anson should leave home to pursue his education, and the widow improved the opportunity to go among her own friends. So, for a season, the old house had a

When a house is shut up, you know how quickly it takes on a look of neglect and decay, and so the Henderson house, which had seemed a cheerful enough residence when the family were in it, soon began to look goggle-eyed and high-shouldered and mysterious, and Aunt Sabrina's "ghost" was reported to be frequently seen looking but it did turn—the cabinet was opened. out the tall, narrow windows.

When the heir was twenty-one, he came When the heir was twenty-one, he came back to claim his own, bringing with him article which his guardians and other discreet persons deemed superfluous; namely, a wife.

But Anson was free now—free in law and in fact; he had done with books and teachers, guardians and advisers;

good while, and now mind."
"To what?" asked Mary.
"To find Aunt Sabrina's money."
"There's nothing very new in that," said Mary, laughing gaily; "at least, in trying to find it."
"No, but there is in the way of doing to said he."

'Is there? What can it be?" asked she.

"To pull the house down," said he.

"O Anson!" cried Mary, "but you're joking—of course you're joking."

"Not a bit of it—never was more in earnest in my life. You see that cabinet is somewhere in the house; there is no doubt about that. Aunt Sabrina was her stroke, and she never left the house afterwards, till she was carried out."

"So I have always heard," said Mary. "Then the cabinet must be here—unless she took it into the next world with her—as no doubt she would if she could," said Anson. "But is it certain that it contained a treasure?" asked Mary.
"Certain? As certain as anything is. You're the first person that ever questioned it. My father believed it—everybody believed it; if there was proof enough to satisfy her contempora-

"I should say so. There's nothing so very strange, either in a misorly old woman hiding her money—they're always doing it—and nothing so strange in my looking for it, that you should make such an ado about it. Think of the folks that, have been hunting of the the folks that have been hunting after Captain Kidd's treasure ever since he tucked it away somewhere a hundred years ago or more."

ies, there's proof enough to satisfy us.

"Has anybody ever found it?" asked

Mary.
"No; but they would if there was nothing but one old house in the way."
"Oh, Anson, spare the old house; your father meant it to stand in the Henderson name--he meant it as a home for you and for Mother Hender-son, and for this dear child—though he never saw him"—and she kissed the boy on her knee. "He thought you would love it for his sake, as I do, Anson. And I love it for itself, too. There isn't a nook nor a corner in it that I don't love. These quaint old window-seats, those great chimneys, this oak wainscotting, how charming they all seemed to me when I came here as your wife, and how charming they are still! And such stories as they tell of the Colonel, your grandfather, and the old Revolutionary days, and of all the people who have lived and died here! I would no more disturb one brick, or thoir graves!"

Never in all his married life had Anson heard his wife make so long a speech before. Never had he heard her in any way question or oppose his judg-ment, and now it seemed to him much is it would if Mary's canary had undertaken to advise the barn-yard fowls about their domestic affairs.

He looked at her a moment in astonishment, and then said: very fine and romantic, but, nevertheless, the old house must come to an end."

"And so much else with it!" said Mother Henderson took a more practical view of the matter. "Where are we going to live meanwhile?" she asked.

"In the porter's lodge," said Anson.
"I can fit it up nicely, and it won't be so very bad as a temporary retreat."

"Look out you don't have to stay there the rest of your days!" said she.
"No fear of that," said Anson. "I mean to build the finest house in the country when I get Aunt Sabrina's

For days there was nothing to re-ward his vigilance, but how shall I de-scribe his emotions when one of the workmen cried out:

"Hurrah, I've found it!" A closet within a closet—that was all; a child's hand could have moved the slide—but the eye of a Paris detective would not have discovered it. Both closets were within a chimney, and hence the space taken up by the interior one did not betray its presence.

It might well have been the flue.

When Anson first saw the cabinet which he had so often heard described —it was ebony bound with silver and inlaid with mother-of-pearl—a faintness came over him, and he leant against the chimney for support.

Recovering himself, he drew it from its hiding-place with trembling hands. But, although he had the key in his pocket, it is to his credit that he would not open it by himself; no, Mary should share his joy and triumph.

They were all three in the lodge— Mother Henderson, Mary and Anson third.

"Look!" was the only word he uttered, as he placed the cabinet on the "Aunt Sabrina's cabinet!" exclaimed

Mother Henderson. He took the key from his pocket and fitted it in the lock. It turned hard, for it was rusty after its long repose, Aunt Sabrina's cyes, so many years ago thing else—it might be a box—he seized it and touched the spring. The cover flew back and disclosed the portrait of a British officer. A folded paper contained a lock of hair and the record, "Major Coverdale; killed at the battle of Cowpens, January 17, 1781."

"Aunt Sabrina's lover!" exclaimed "What a handsome man! Poor Aunt what a handsome man! Poor Aunt Sabrina!" exclaimed Mary.

"A portrait and a box of love-letters!" cried Anson. "For this—for this I have thrown away my life; for this I have excnanged the home of my another shown and Anson did nothing to reclaim it. He neither sowed nor reaped. So several years went by; then one day, as Mary was sitting in her chamber holding the little Anson third in her lap, her husband came in and sat down beade her with the air of one who has something to disclose, as, indeed, he had. He did not even speak to the boy

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

Henceforth the telegraph offices of France are to record in detail all thunder-storms which may be observed.

-The London Sanitary company is formed for the purpose of putting dwelling and other houses in perfect sanitary condition. -The evil effect of the electric light upon the eyes is due, it is supposed, to the constant changes in the intensity of the light, whereby the eyes are greatly fatigued. -It has been computed that the power of the steam engines in England would suffice to raise from the quarries and place in position all the Great Pyramid n eighteen hours. -Asphalte is considered by M. Leon

Malo as chalk strongly impregnated with bitumen. It was first applied to road making in 1849 by M. Morian, a Swiss engineer. In 1851 it was first tried in Paris, in the Rue Bergere. -Experiments have been made with compressed gunpowder, made to fit the drill-holes, and cut into short lengths. It was found to possess many advantages over loose powder, among which is a saving of forty per cent. in powder. -In a recent work on the nests and eggs of birds, Dr. W. von Reichenan states that the ornamental plumage, crests, etc., of the male bird are due to an excess of energy, while the vitality of the female is exhausted by the production of eggs and the task of incubation.

-English wool is subjected to a puri-English wool is subjected to a purifying process in a heated room during six months before it is used, whereby the "ekc," or grease and dirt, is taken out of it. American wool just fleeced from the sheep's back, is worked up, and as the obe is still in it it will not and, as the eke is still in it, it will not take the colors. The imperfect dyeing of American cloths results in rapid fading while the Fredish leads ing, while the English lasts.

-Dr. Barety, of Nice, has successfully employed turpentine vapor in the treat-ment of whooping-cough. The drug is allowed to stand in plates in the room occupied by the patient, a resort to which simple expedient is believed to orgative leasen the coverity and duration greatly lessen the severity and duration of the malady. Dr. Barety was led to a trial of this remedy by observing a marked improvement in the case of a child severely affected who had been allowed to sleep in a newly-painted room, redolent with the turpentine odor.

—It may not, perhaps, be known that a man wearing dark clothes is more lia-ble to infection from contagious disease than he who wears light-colored gar-ments, because particles which emanate from diseased or decaying bodies are much more readily absorbed by dark than by light fabries. This is easy of proof. Expose a light and dark coat to the fumes of tobacco for five minutes and it will be found that the dark one smells stronger than the other of tobacco smoke, and it will retain the odor longer.

Lime as a Manure.

Mr. R. Gordon, of Gordonshire, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, writes on this topic as follows, in the North British  $\Delta griculturist.$ Lime is one of the most important natural manures we possess, and the value of its application to the soil has been known from very early periods. The action of lime as a manuro is entirely regulated by the form and man-ner in which it is applied to the soil. Quick lime should be used for heavy and tonacious soils, as well as those containing a fair quantity of vegetable matter. On the other hand, if the soil be light and friable, with little vegeta-ble matter in it, caustic lime would in such a case do more harm than good. Mild lime ought to be used, treated with a mixture of earth, and exposure to the atmospheric air, from which it takes earbonic acid, which takes away a great deal of its caustic properties. The different circumstances and conditions of soil will not allow a uniform practice to be adopted; but judgment and experience ought to regulate the application of all manures. Every farmer should study his own soil, and themselve he would be able to result the thereby he would be able to avoid the misapplication of good manure. Before the introduction of artificial manures, lime was more universally used then lime was more universally used than now, which helps to account for the poor crops of clover, and the difficulty of raising good turnips. It is essentially necessary that a supply of lime should exist in the soil to meet the requirements of the various crops. Every cultivated plant needs a supply of lime for the proper building up of its structure, and, in combination with phosphoric acid, lime forms a large portion of the skeletons of the animals who feed upon the crops. A soil may contain large supplies of every ingredient which a crop requires, and still be unable to yield them to the plant, they being in an inactive state, and it is only that portion of the soil which is soluble quirements of the various crops. Every that portion of the soil which is soluble in water which is available as plant food. Any analysis of a soil which only tells its composition is of little value unless it can show the active matter ready to be taken up by the crop. Lime acts upon the dormant matter in the soil, and performs the important func-tion of rendering these active. Clay soils generally contain within themsolves potash and soda, and we know by experiment that lime liberates these inorganic elements. According to Prof. Way, lime helps to form a valuable class of salta known as double silicates or alumina, which have the power of absorbing ammonia from the atmosphere. Lime neutralizes the acids in the soil and sweetens the herbage, besides supplying food for the perfect growth of the crops. It is thought by some to be a wasteful practice to allow lime to come in immediate contact with farmyard manure, thinking it would cause a loss of ammonia; but they overlook the controlling influence consequent upon the action taking place in the soil. The action of caustic lime upon a mixture of farmyard manure and decayed organic matter produces a most valuable fertilizer, viz., nitrate of potash. Lime, besides being a plant food and bringing into useful condition theseveral organic and inorganic matters in the soil, also improves its physical character, rendering stiff and tenacious clays more friable and easy to work. However, the use of lime renders a supply of other manure necessary, and under a good system of husbandry the increase of crops will increase the quantity of manure. Taking into account the various functions it performs, it is one of our best natural manures. However, i #### cannot be expected to produce its full effects immediately after being applied. Summer Drinks.

In extremely warm weather, refreshing beverages are very desirable, especially in the hay field, where one is exposed to the scoreling heat of the sun and the whole system is perspiring with the heat and exercise. It is very im-prudent to swallow great quantities of ice-cold drink when one is excessively warm; a few swallows taken slowly will quench the thirst far better than a whole gobletful swallowed without stopping.
The very best of all drinks is new milk with icc sufficient to cool it. It is not only cooling, but also nourishing. It is a most grateful beverage, not only in the field, but in the kitchen, and nursery as well as sick room, where it should always have a place. In fevers, it is the most delightful cordial that can be administered. A very nice beverage is made by taking two quarts of water, a tablespoonful of pulverized ginger, half a teacupful of strong vinegar and half a teacupful of molasses or maple sugar. stir well, add a lump of ice the size of a quart bowl to keep it cool; put into a tin pail with a tight cover, and it is a very good field drink, and will keep cool half a day.

Another drink is made by taking a lemon or two, roll or squeeze till soft, slice very thin and put into a large bowl and turn a pint of boiling water over the slices. Let it stand till cool; then allow a quartof cold water to each lemon and half a cupful of sugar; stir weil and add a lump of ice to make it very cold. The acid of the lemon is very grateful to the mouth and stomach on a hot day. All iced drinks should be sipped slowly, as they quench the thirst letter and do not give a chill, as if taken in large swallows and great quantities. Still another drink is prequantities. Still another drink is prepared by taking two eggs, seat theroughly till frothy, and half a teacupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of extract of vanilla and a quart of milk; cool well with ice. It is very delicious and strengthening on a hot day. Another one is made by taking a teacupful of raspberry jam, stir into it three pints of water, strain it through a line colander water, strain it through a fine colander and set in the ice chest till very cold; it is a very pleasant beverage. For hay pitchers nothing excels good hot coffee, as it stimulates a little and seems to raise sufficient internal heat so that perspiration flows freely, and keeps up the strength.

Refreshing drinks are a very great comfort during the summer heat, and give much nourishment to the system, us one is not very apt to feel hungry in the long summer days when the thermometer ranges from ninety to one hundred degrees in the shade. The more a person drinks the more he personage wat one cannot halp craying spires; yet one cannot help craving some palatable beverage to cool the parched lips and mouth in the heat of summer. It is much better to take little at a time, and to drink more frequently, than to quaff a great quantity at a time. Frequent bathing of the face and head is a great preventive of thirst. Men are not half so liable to get over-heated if they occasionally wipe off their faces with a wet towel or sponge. People do not take half the pains to protect themselves from the heat of dog days that they do to guard against the inclemency of cold, and there is double the danger arising from overheating, that there is from freezing. - Farmer's Wife," in Country Gentleman. —During the hot sun and drying winds, a good mulch is far better for plants and trees than watering.

DR. PRICE'S REPUTATION! The been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. Visits made regularly.

CHOICE CONCERT.

Last evening a very goodly sized audience, made up of our music-lovers and best citizens, gathered at the Opera house to listen to the concert given by the above named club. The programme was a varied one, and though perhaps not as popular in its tinge as some, yet pleased the audience, and its execution fairly met the expectations of those there gath-

Miss Etta Butler, the soprano, gave two solos, in which her voice was shown to good advantage, especially in her song Flower of the Alps," which called forth hearty encore. Her voice is quite full, its range very fair, and the higher notes especially sweet and clear. Her execution was remarkably fine, and she showed long and careful culture.

Miss May Phonix showed a rich, sweet and full contralto voice, and her solo "I thought to be your bride," called forth much cnthusiastic applause, and to the encore she responded with another charming song.

Dr. C. T. Barnes, who is already an acknowledged favorite here, did excellent work, but did not meet the expectations which had been excited by his previous successes here. He did not seem in good voice, some of the tones being husky, and it appearing to be an effort for him to reach others. He sang well, but knowing that he has sung much better before Janesville audiences there could not but be felt some disappointment.

Francis F. Powers, the baritone of the party, showed a remarkable voice, of good range, taking the lower notes very well, and some of the upper lones most excellently. His voice was clear, and his solo work called forth a well merited en-

Prof. Titcomb, as accompanist, never did better work, and his piano solo was worthy of the applause which it called forth, it being one of the finest numbers on the programme.

The quartet work was excellent, their voices blending very sweetly, and they showed their ability to give forth the sweetest and most harmonious strains without the strengthening support of an instrumental accompaniment.

As a whole the concert was excellent. The audience showed their appreciation not only by applause, but by a generous bestowal of floral tributes, noticeable among which was a beautiful lyre, which was presented to Prof. Titcomb by admiring friends.

The club are to appear at Geneva Lake this evening, and will then proceed to visit other summer resorts in this State.
